Press Release

Clermont Chamber, Clermont County, and ED3C receive UC Economics Center Award

The Clermont Chamber of Commerce, the Clermont County Board of Commissioners and the Economic Development Corporation of Clermont County (ED3C) were awarded the Greater Cincinnati Service to Community Award at UC's Economics Center for Education & Research annual luncheon on March 25.

Each year the UC Economics Center recognizes local examples of outstanding economic development practices. The Clermont Chamber, Clermont County and ED3C were recognized for grounding their practices in economic research, improving the economic welfare of the people of Clermont County and leading the way in innovative and thoughtful approaches to economic development. Using the Economics Center's research and consulting services, this public private partnership identified high opportunity industries and workforce needs.

Please join us in congratulating the Clermont Chamber of Commerce, the Clermont County Board of Commissioners and ED3C for their unified approach to economic development.

Thomas Heekin, Chairman UC Economics Center for Education & Research, Steve Wharton, Executive Director ED3C (Economic Development Corporation of Clermont County), Scott Crowell, Clermont County Commissioner, Matt Van Sant, President/CEO Clermont Chamber of Commerce
